It is only by free utterance of the natives can be taught to take an intelligent interest in the progress of their country, so that instead of being blindly and willingly led whithersoever their rulers choose, they may advance in one body, severally and unitedly aiming at the same object-the regeneration of their country. In this advance the people cannot, if they would, throw off the religious sentiment, which, manifesting itself in various ways, exists fundamentally the same in all nations and is found wanting in comparatively few individuals. There is much to be done, and the native journals might occupy themselves much more profittion by the majority, or a large portion, of: country into a state of anarchy. Let the writer's suggestion be adopted so far tha all religions be left to work as best they cap. The survival of the fittest will settle all difficulties in this direction.

REST IN THE GRAVE. Hest in the grave !- but rest is for the weary. And her slight limbs were partly pirt, for toll; Rest is for lives worn out, descried, dreary, Which have no brightness left for death to spoil,

We yearn for rest, when power and passion wasted Have left to memory nothing but regret : She sleeps, while life's best pleasures, all sintasted, Had senree approached her rosy lips as yet. Her child-like eyes still lacked their crowning sweetness

She died with the pathelie incompleteouss Of beauty's promise on her pallid face. What and eveloped gifts, what powers untested, Perchance with her have passed away from earth;

Her form was ripening to more perfect grace,

What genes of thought in that young brain arrested May never grow and quicken and have hirth! She know not love who might have loved so truly; Though love dreams stirred her fancy, faint and floot

Her and's othernal wings were budding newly, Her woman's heart had scarce begun to beat. We drank the sweets of life, we drank the bitter, And death to its would almost seem a boon; But why, to her, for whom glad life were fitter, Should darkness come ere day had reached its noon!

No answer, save the coho of our weaping Have slain the unborn flower and new-fiedged bird.
